A STUPENDOUS CRIME

The bill to reopen and count the ballots cast in the last municipal election in New York was killed by the Albany legislature. The object of the bill was to ascertain the extent of the fraud committed at the election by which McClellan was declared Mayor of N. Y.

W. R. Hearst, his opponent, insisted that he received more votes by several thousand than did McClellan and demanded a recount. McClellan, while claiming that he was the recipient of a decisive majority, has fought a recount on every technicality known to the law. It is obvious to the dullest mind that he fights a recount because he fears that an honest count would demonstrate his defeat. The writer was in New York not long after the municipal election which resulted in the seating of McClellan. He talked with eye witnesses of the scenes at the polls. Men who came to vote and were known to be antagonistic to McClellan were knocked down and beaten insensibly. People who objected to broken heads did not dare to take chances and stayed away from the polls.

The ambulance wagons were running all day to the receiving hospitals carrying the wounded in what was supposed to be a peaceful battle of the ballots. The fight was carried on mostly with knives, pistols and clubs. The police, in sympathy with McClellan, turned their backs upon these scenes of outrage. After the polls closed it was still worse. Clerks and judges of election not in sympathy with the choice of Tammany Hall were kicked out of the counting places and ballot boxes with a majority for Hearst were broken open and pitched into the river.

It was an election carried by force and ruffianism, rioting and chicanery and the counting and returns was simply the limit of highhandedness.

The counters gave their man any sort of a majority that they thought he needed in the respective precincts. This was done with the connivance of the wealthy "safe, sane and conservative element" who argued that the election of Hearst would encourage the Socialistic class.

It is the refusal of the Albany legislature to give the contestant an honest and fair count that will augment the ranks of Socialism by the thousands. Everywhere men are found who voted for McClellan and admit the election of Hearst. Any attempt to deprive a candidate of an open, honest count simply means tampering with a volcano. It is uprooting every principal of law, order and the constitutional foundations of a free government. Those who sow a wind of unfairness will reap a whirlwind of anarchy.

If McClellan was a man instead of a treacherous scrub and coward he would demand a recount himself.
